March 18, 2020

In response to the present Coronavirus health risk, the Conservation Commission is cancelling its March 23rd meeting and tentatively postponing all matters to their April 13th meeting, in an effort to protect the health of the public.

The Commission anticipates an unusually high attendance due to elevated public interest in applications that would be presented, and have determined at this time that a virtual meeting presents a significant challenge to accommodate the many participants expected for this meeting. This is subject to change as the coronavirus situation evolves, but we feel it is prudent for the health of applicants and the general public to cancel this meeting.

As the situation is very fluid at this point, we will endeavor to keep you updated. Currently, our office is open for phone calls, so please feel free to contact us for further information at 978-440-5471 or email us at concom@sudbury.ma.us.

We thank you for your patience and consideration as we navigate this public health situation and apologize for any inconvenience this may pose to you.
